Sample setup · Tern

Open Tern and see exactly what needs you today.

I set up Tern so the day's work finds you. Payments due, today's tasks, new inquiries and birthdays show up on their own. Below is a sample account with made-up clients.

1 At a glance. Sales and commission this month.

2 Payments due. Who owes what, and when. Soonest first.

3 Tasks. Today's work. Late ones get a red mark.

4 New inquiry. A client filled out a form, and Tern made the trip.

5 Daily overview. Birthdays, plus trips leaving or coming home.

1 workflow runs every cruise

15 tasks, each on its own date

4 client emails, waiting for your OK

14 bookings with payments tracked

7 automations, all off until you turn them on

Nothing slips.
Every step shows up on its due date.

Clients get everything on time.
In your words, never a generic template.

You see what you're owed.
Every commission, and when it should arrive.

One workflow runs every cruise.

Apply it once on deposit day. Every due date sets itself from deposit day or the trip dates. No one has to remember the next step.

My Cruise Trip workflow: 15 tasks, each with its own timing.

What happens, and when

- Deposit day
  Record the booking. Welcome email and traveler form go out.
- First 2 weeks
  Insurance quote, claim the booking, passport check.
- 104 to 85 days before
  Final payment reminder, 2 weeks before it's due. Then the online check-in reminder.
- 45 to 7 days before
  Build the itinerary, check it, reconfirm the hotel, send know-before-you-go.
- Day 1 of the trip
  The trip moves to Traveling by itself.
- After the trip
  The trip moves to Traveled. Welcome home, thank-you note, referral ask.
- 75 days after
  Check that the commission came in.

7 automations: 4 client emails, 2 automatic status changes, and 1 AI trip review. You approve every email before it goes live. Until you turn an email on, its task reminds you to send it yourself.

The money side, tracked for you.

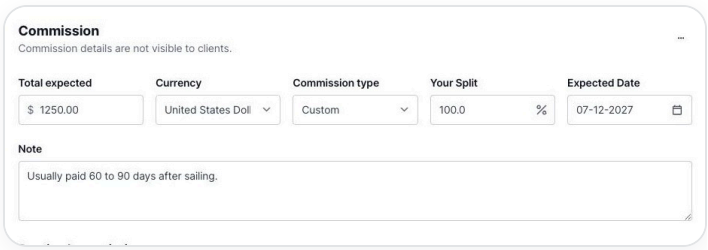

Every trip shows what's paid, what's due, and what you'll earn. A reminder for the final payment is already set, 2 weeks before it's due.

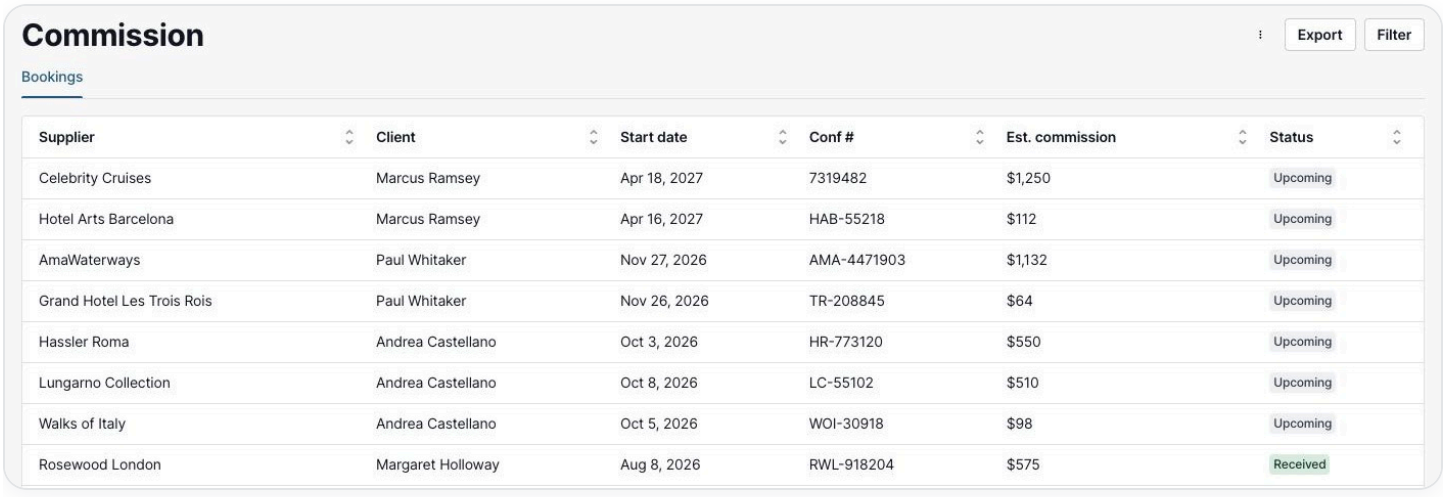

One trip's bookings: total cost, what's paid, the balance due, and expected commission.

Deposit paid. Final payment due Jan 18.

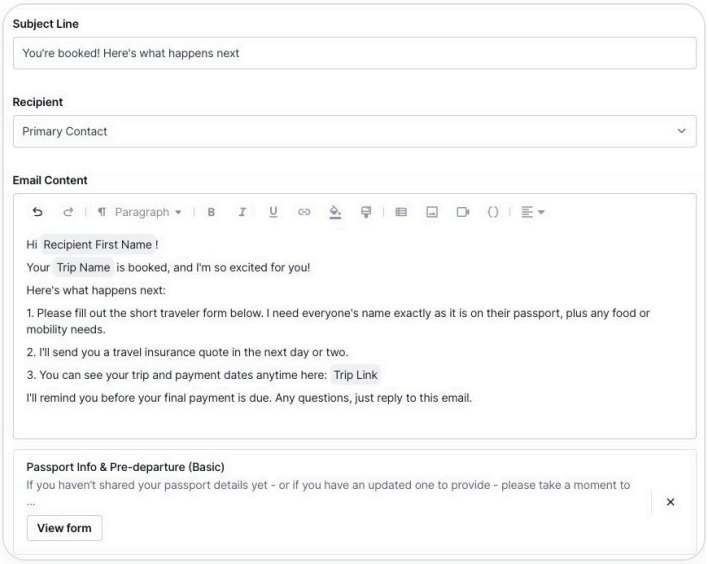

Expected commission, and the date it should arrive.

Every booking's commission in one list. When it's paid, you mark it Received. If a supplier forgets to pay, you'll see it.

What you get in a setup like this.

- One workflow for the trips you book most
  Every task is timed from deposit day or the trip dates, so the next step shows up on its own.
- Client emails that sound like you
  I write them from emails you've already sent. You approve every email before a client sees it.
- Payments and commission, tracked
  Every booking shows what's paid, what's due, and when your commission should arrive.
- A dashboard you can trust
  What's due, what's late and what's new, every morning.
- A short guide with screenshots
  What's set up, and how to change it. You never need me to keep it running.

A client email with the traveler form attached. It stays off until you approve it.

What changes for you

- Nothing slips. Every step shows up on its due date.
- Clients get everything on time, in your words.
- You see what you're owed, and when it should arrive.
- More free evenings and weekends, and more time to travel yourself.

Want this for your trips?

1. Pick one kind of trip. The one you book most.
2. We map it together on a call: what goes out, and when.
3. I set it up in your Tern account. You approve it, and you get a short guide to run it.
